Hollerin' Smith.

Remington once told a story of himself that will bear reteiling. One of his cowboy acquaintances in the west was known as Hollerin' Smith because of his favorite way of enjoying himself. Remington made a number of studies of him both in repose and at his favorite pursuit, and on returning to New York one time he utilized these in a series of illustrations in a magazine article. The next time he went west and got to Smith's neighborhood Smith came over to see him on the very day of his arrival, and hauling from his pocket a page torn from a magazine with one of Remington's studies of him as the central figure of a group in a state of cruption, inquired: "Say, is that me?"

Fred was cautious as he said, not Hollerin' Smith.

Fred was cautious as he said, not being exactly sure of what was next on the programme, and replied: "Well, I got the idea from you, of course, but—"

"Oh, it's all right," said Smith, "no offence: if it's me just say so."

"Well, yes, it's a fairly close portrait of you," said Remington.

"That's what the boys at the ranch said." Smith came back. "I look like that when I holler, do I?"

"I think you do."

"Well," said Simth, tucking the page away in his pocket, "if that's the state of the case then all I've got to say is that Hollerin' Smith has hollered the last holler that he'll ever holler. seems to be a part of Santa Claus's good-natured character, but he would surely advise his friends to dye when it came to the renovation of seemingly old clothing. For it is a fact that when properly dyed, even an old sarrhent looks like new again. Let us show you how to save fifty per cent. of your clothing expenses.
